Also, is there a way for us to choose what we want to appear on our shortcuts bar? The Dating thing is on there too and I hate that it is because its not something that I use or access. I wish there was some way for us to reorganize that space and choose what we want shown there like frankly Id rather see the Weather app on the Dating apps space because thats more useful to me. You, like, fixed the arrangements of the shortcuts and to some of us that arrangement is not even practical because the apps that are displayed by default (as opposed to those youd see only if you click see more) are not the ones were going to use anyway. So I wish there was a way for us to customize that. Not all of us are looking for relationships through social media so please stop shoving that Dating feature down our throats. I tried to select the most relevant option, but it still organizes the newsfeed posts and shows the recent ones. I dont wanna see every single post of one person that shares a ton of posts every minute. I can no longer see the posts of those more important to me and the pages I like without scrolling through every single recent post. Why the is it like this now? I know that theres an option favorites where i can choose whose posts I wanna see but it would give me a hard time to pick from my friend list and I dont mind seeing posts from other facebook friends of mine from time to time. I dont understand why this would be like this now. I refuse to scroll through every single post and I cannot enjoy using facebook like this. Fix the relevant option because right now its pretty much the same as the most recent one. I thought it was just a problem on my phone but I tried logging out and in again but its still the same. I tried on browser, and its the same also. Please change this back to normal like before where I could see only some posts from people, not all especially if a post appears right after the persons last post. To most relevant, not posts from just now and like 1-2mins ago that dont even have reacts and comments yet. Theres just no fun and its no longer interesting scrolling on newsfeed like this. Thanks. Perhaps my account was unjustly blocked by Facebook due to a mistaken identity. I believe I have been using my account for personal use exclusively for more than six years. Suddenly, one day, it was disabled, and to make matters worse, I was unable to log in to any other or new accounts. access my Instagram, Facebook, and Messenger accounts on my iPhone. When you asked for my identification, I sent you my national i.d in the hopes that you would help me get back into my account. However, I am using my real name as my first name because most of my family and friends know me that way, but it is not confirmed by my email account, which I have been using for over how many years. Knowing that my old pictures and memories will never again be visible makes me feel even more disappointed. The Facebook team did not provide a reason, so I'm not sure what I did. 1 hope you can do anything addressing this situation. It's incredibly unjust. Facebook owns the rights, so I can't contest my appeal.I hope you fix this kind of issue because i can't communicate with my friend. My friend also encounter this kind issue but she fixed immediately but when I did what she did into her account to my account, it didn't work. After 24 hrs of appealing, my account is still in review and no progress.TodayGamesApps Perhaps my account was unjustly blocked by Facebook due to a mistaken identity.
