With our range of shredders, you can ensure that old paperwork is disposed of effectively and securely. Our selection features a number of shredders such as strip-cut shredders, cross-cut shredders and micro-cut shredders. Our shredders provide a reliable and efficient solution for safeguarding sensitive information. With a range of models catering to various needs, our shredders ensure the secure destruction of confidential documents. I am a huge fan of Staples and their many rewarding programs and features. Their customer service has certainly been hit or miss for me in the past, however overall I benefit from being a Staples customer. Whether it is Staples shredding, their generous ink recycling program or their many lucrative Visa gift card promos, I often find myself in Staples stores. Get the Most on Your Staples Spending If you are spending a lot of money at Staples, then it makes sense to get a card that earns 5X more points at office supply stores. That card is the no annual fee Chase Ink Cash. The Chase Ink Cash card earns 5X Ultimate Rewards points on Staples purchases both in-store and online. It is the card where I earn the most amount of points every year! I use those points for free stays at Hyatt and flights on their airline partners. Learn More. Paper Shredding at Staples - Need to Know One of the things I HATE most is shredding all of my documents, but it is a necessary evil. Between all of my various businesses I end up with a lot of stuff that needs to be shredded and while I have a decent shredder at home, emptying it is messy and I simply don't enjoy the experience. Plus it does tend to overheat after awhile. In comes the Staples free shredding coupon. Is Shredding at Staples Safe? Just like thousands of businesses around the country, it appears that Staples uses an offsite shredding company to handle the shredding of documents. This means your items are placed into a secure bin to be picked up later. I have worked at many companies that use this same system and find it is secure enough for me. The shredding bins are locked, but it is also important to know that your items aren't shredded on-site. Don't Pay Full Price for Shredding The normal cost to shred documents at Staples is $1 per pound, but you can now get 5 pounds for free on each visit, with the coupon (see below) working more than once. When shredding documents at Staples, normally my wife and I go in, recycle our ink cartridges, shred our documents and take care of any gift card or other business we have. Good times. How to Get the Staples Free Shredding Coupon So how do you get a free Staples coupon for paper shredding? Well, the coupon isn't always available, but as of August, 2020 Staples has returned with an awesome coupon that gives 5 pounds of free shredding per visit. It isn't quite as good as the old free shredding coupon, however it is a way to handle shredding those messy documents without having to pay. To get the free paper shredding coupon from Staples simply visit the Staples coupons page. You will also find many other money saving Staples coupons if you are into that sort of thing. Hopefully they will continue to offer these free shredding coupons into the future! Staples Coupons Bottom Line Since I know a lot of you are in Staples stores regularly, I figured this might be a nice little trick to share with you. The Staples shredding coupon is good through the end of the year and can be used over and over, so there is no limit as to the amount of shredding you can have done. Let's hope they bring back the coupon for next year as well, because you can never have enough free shredding! Do you need an easy way to destroy your unwanted personal documents quickly and securely? At Shred Station® our domestic shredding for private individuals is available both on and off-site. Identity theft is a real and growing risk. Your personal paperwork can give fraudsters information about where you live, bank, work and even shop. Domestic shredding for private individuals allows you to dispose of confidential data with security, with ease and cost-effectively. You could burn your confidential documents, but it's very un-eco-friendly and bonfires are often reported by neighbours, with fines of up to £20,000 for unauthorised fires. The cleanest, easiest way to avoid the risk of identity theft is to have your personal documents securely shredded. We can help. At Shred Station, we offer a professional, affordable shredding service for people just like you, who want to make sure their personal data never falls into the wrong hands. What we do We can come and collect all your unwanted personal documents and securely shred them at one of our state-of-the-art plants. Alternatively, if you'd like even greater reassurance, you can use our mobile shredding service and watch your documents being shredded right there at your home. All the paper we shred is recycled and nothing goes to landfill. So our service is just as environmentally friendly as your home recycling collection - but much less risky. We're established experts in destroying confidential waste. We work with dozens of leading firms and public-sector organisations, and can offer helpful, unbiased advice on all the issues around shredding. The Ship2Shred Service For smaller quantities of domestic shredding, our sister company, Ship2Shred, may be of interest. This service involves ordering and filling fully-tracked, next day delivery envelopes with up to 1kg of paperwork per envelope, and sending it directly to our secure destruction facility. With this new postal shredding service, you'll receive a Certificate of Destruction for each envelope you send. All envelopes are destroyed in line with BS EN 15713 standards. On this page you'll find the answer to common questions about domestic paper shredding and professional domestic paper shredding services. Can I shred paper with staples in it? Yes. If you use a paper shredding service, you won't need to remove staples (or any other stationery such as paperclips or plastic wallets) as the shredders are able to shred them. Small home-office paper shredders are unlikely to be powerful enough to shred through staples. If you're using a home shredder, you'll need to remove the staples first. How can I dispose of shredded paper? If you live in the UK, most kerbside paper and cardboard recycling services will collect shredded paper. However, it's important to check the service in your area as some local authorities don't make these collections. What's the best way to dispose of confidential papers? Shredding is the most straightforward and cost-effective way to deal with confidential waste. You'll need to use a crosscut shredder to ensure the paper is shredded into small enough pieces. Strip-cut shredders produce thin strips of paper which someone who was determined to read your confidential waste could put back together. Other methods of destroying confidential paper without using a shredder - such as burning or soaking paper can be time-consuming, less secure and less environmentally friendly than using a home shredder or shredding and recycling service. Are paper shredding services available for home offices? Yes, many paper shredding companies provide a domestic service. This usually means they will give you paper shredding bags that they will collect once full, and take the paper away to be shredded and recycled. Where can I shred my paper myself? For health and safety reasons, most shredding companies don't allow customers to shred their own documents. If you're worried that using a shredding company won't be secure, choose a mobile shredding service - with these, you can watch your documents being shredded. Can I watch my paper being shredded? Yes, if you use a mobile shredding service. Other services don't allow it, as it wouldn't be safe to have customers near the shredding machines, plus they have a duty to protect other customers' data. At Russell Richardson, you may be able to watch your papers being shredded via a screen in our reception area. However, we don't allow unauthorised people into the warehouse. Can I shred envelopes with plastic windows? Yes, most paper mills will screen for small pieces of plastic and metal during the manufacturing process and remove these before recycling the shredded paper into a new product. Industrial shredders can easily handle envelopes with plastic windows. If you're planning to shred your envelopes in a home shredder, test one first to see if your shredder will shred it without jamming the machine. Most home shredders should be able to handle envelopes with plastic windows. If you're not sure and don't want to test it, check the instruction manual to see if your shredder is designed to shred these types of envelopes. Should I shred junk mail? Yes. Junk mail may just seem like an annoyance but it's actually dangerous to dispose of it without shredding it. For example, if a thief got hold of a piece of junk mail offering you a credit card, there's nothing to stop them filling in the details themselves, using your information. Should I shred old passports? Although old passports contain personal information, if you don't have an up-to-date passport, keep your expired passport as proof of your citizenship. If you've renewed your passport, it's best to shred the old one (or at least the ID page) to avoid it falling into the wrong hands. Our shredding collection features high-quality devices for varying levels of security. Choose shredders from our selection with shredders ideal for confidentiality and data security in home office and business environments. There are several types of shredders to choose from in our selection which includes cross-cut shredders, strip-cut shredders and micro-cut shredders. Cross-cut shredders use special blades to chop paper into small square or diamond shapes. Pieces range from 0.375 to 0.0313 inches wide. They're a popular choice for small businesses and individuals. Strip-cut shredders work by using rotating blades, these shredders shred paper into long strips, with strip widths between 0.375 inches and 0.0625 inches. As a simple way to destroy paperwork, this method achieves confidentiality. Micro-cut shredders are extremely secure shredding devices reduce paper into minuscule pieces. For example, a sheet can be cut into over 12,000 pieces. These devices guarantee security and are popular with research facilities and government bodies.
